Our story

In 1980 a French association headed by Yannick Pavéc organised a conference in Vienna with speakers from at least six other European countries and it proved a great success. Sir Kenneth Cork, who had just completed his term in office as Lord Mayor of London, organised a meeting in London the following year. He also arranged for the incorporation of L'Association Européenne des Practiciens des Procédures Collectives (AEPPC) in France and formed the first Council with many of those who had been in Vienna.

In 1982 the British practitioners celebrated the 21st birthday of their Association, the IPA, with a conference in Cape Cod, USA, inviting North American practitioners and as a result, Richard Turton (UK) and Ian Strang (Canada) founded INSOL International.

AEPPC joined INSOL International in 1984 as a member association. Developments in France in the late 1990s made AEPPC an antiquated term and the name of the organisation was changed at the Paris Council Meeting in April 2000. The new name was debated and INSOL Europe was voted in.

Since then INSOL Europe has undergone great changes with a combination of globalisation, the development of the insolvency professions in both Western and Eastern Europe, the continually increasing emphasis on effective reorganisation of ailing businesses, and the development of global models such as the European Insolvency Regulation and the UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross Border Insolvency. INSOL Europe has risen to these challenges and continues to grow and thrive. We look forward to welcoming you as a member.
